XPO RANKED #1 IN MAILINGS & LOGISTICS COMPANIES IN LA

Los Angeles Business Journal Publishes
2011 List of Largest Women-Owned Businesses

Torrance, Calif. – Oct., 2011 – XPO, a leading provider of international and domestic mailing services, announced its 1st place position within Mailings and Logistics companies from the Los Angeles Business Journal's "The List". XPO also ranked #24 for all women-owned businesses.

The Los Angeles Business Journal developed "The List" rankings based on 2010 revenue. In order to qualify for the lists, companies must be headquartered in Los Angeles County and have female ownership of at least 50 percent.

"XPO has worked hard to achieve the coveted number one position in our mailings and logistics segment. We take great pride in being the Los Angeles leader," said Kelly Martinez, CEO of XPO. "Although we have always been a women-owned business, since we were formally certified a few years ago, it has led to additional business. Our leadership position and growth can be attributed to offering our customers customized mailing solutions with comprehensive pricing that is lower than the competition. Our model fits well in this tough economy where our customers are seeking savings."

XPO was founded primarily by a group of women who were industry veterans searching for alternative mailing solutions to what was then currently available. Within the business category of mailing and logistics, XPO is one of the largest women-owned businesses in the world. XPO is structured to allow for customized mailing solutions to fit their clients' needs, something else that is not common in the logistics and transportation industries. These factors have led to XPO's continued growth.
